and a Liberian, were arrested attempting to sell the ivory. They denounced the third who is a Senegalese and wealthy owner of a jewelry shop. He was arrested and confessed that lines of supply for the lion teeth to produce necklaces are from Ghana and Nigeria, while elephant tails lines to produce bracelets are from Cameroon. This ring of traffickers is linked to several infamous ones, including the network of Kromah Moazu, the EAGLE arrest from 2017 in Kampala with 1.3 tons of ivory. The 3 arrested engaged also in rhino horn trafficking and trafficking of gold and precious stones.

4 traffickers arrested in a collaboration between EAGLE Senegal and Panthera following the poaching of a lioness in the outskirts of a national park. An AK47, 2 hunting guns and a honey badger skin also seized.

4 traffickers were arrested this month during two operations with almost 250 kg of giant pangolin scales. The two operations took place in Cameroon's capital city Yaoundé. During the first operation, 66 kg of giant pangolin scales were recovered from two traffickers who travelled some 75 km from Ntui, to Yaoundé, using public transportation. During the second operation, 180 kg of pangolin scales concealed in 7 sacks were seized. They transported the pangolin scales hidden inside pepper and wild fruits by trucks from Lomie, located some 380 km from Yaoundé. It is not always the case that entirely giant pangolin scales are seized during operations. On the contrary, it is very rarely the case. Most of the time very little or no giant pangolin scales are found in seizures that are usually made up of scales from the white bellied and black bellied pangolins. The reason is simple, finding the giant pangolin has become very difficult even for the poacher. Scientists doing research on pangolins in the country use camera traps. This is most probably due to the intense poaching and trafficking that has been afflicting the species for several decades. Extinction for this species may be coming too soon.

The giant pangolin is the largest living pangolin species; weighing up to 35 kg. Its range stretches along the equator from West Africa, passing through Central Africa to Uganda and Tanzania. Feared extinct in some countries like Rwanda, the giant pangolin is classified as endangered (very high risk of extinction in the wild) on the IUCN Red List. It gives birth to a young every one to two years and feeds on ants and termites. It is uncommon to find in the wild and generally rare. It is hunted for its meat and scales for trafficking by the local poachers who are activated by trafficking networks.

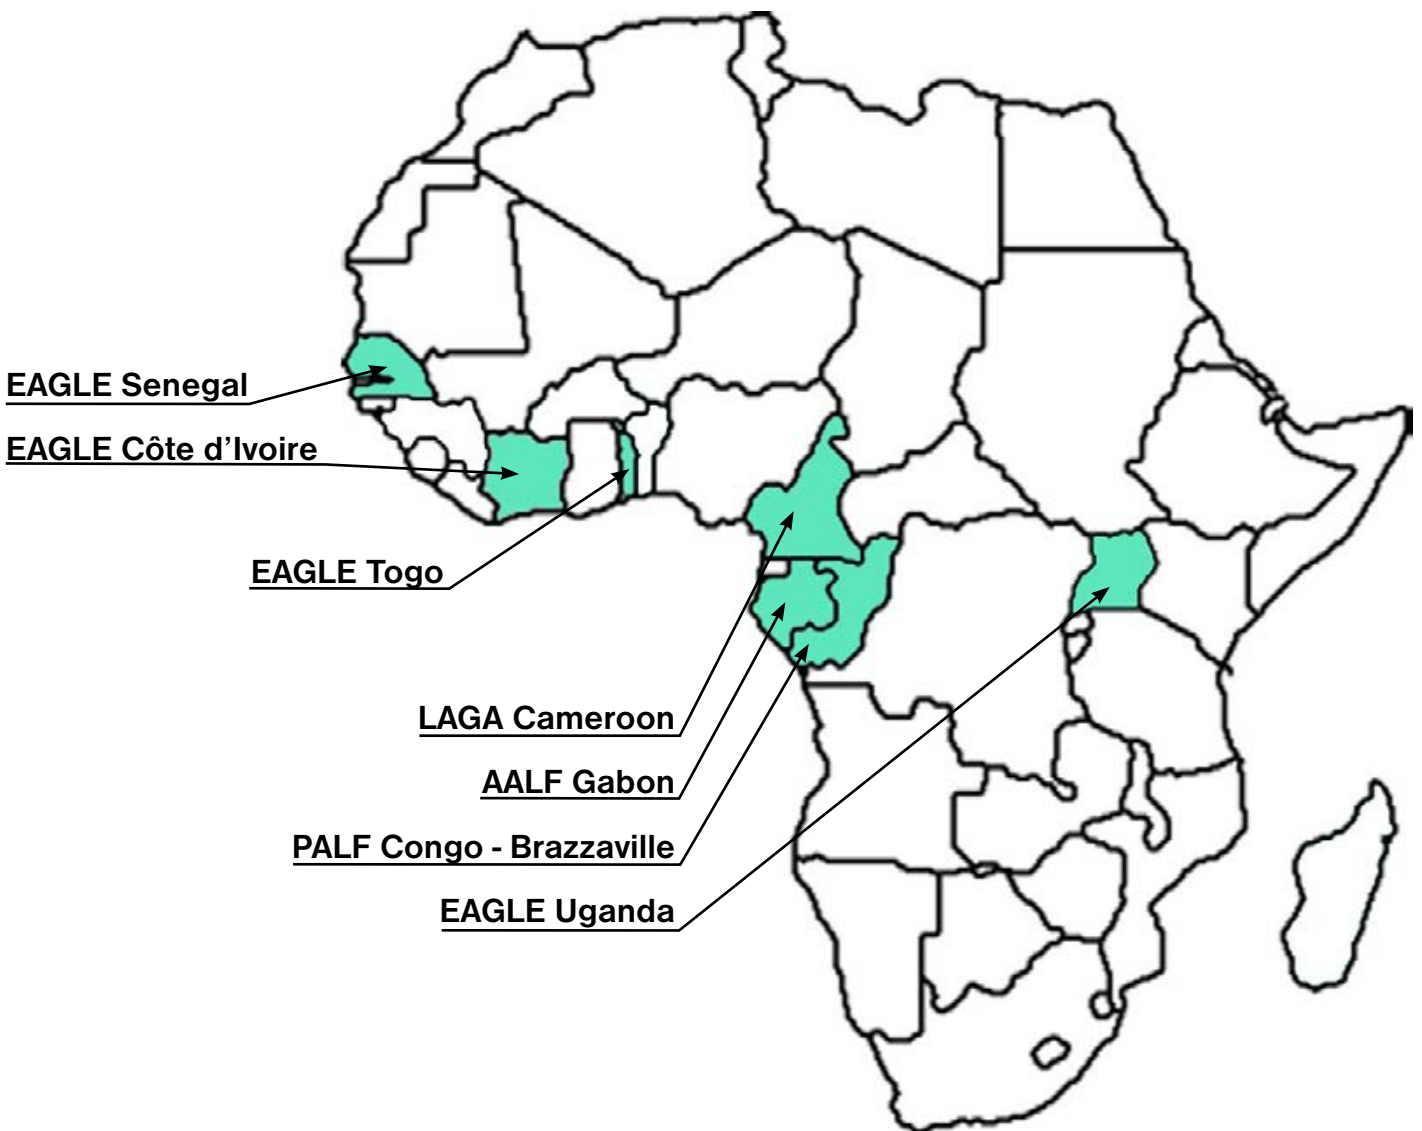

International Media

- Ofir Drori was guest on a Wild Mission Podcast that narrates the story of the how he moved from a journalist passing through Cameroon to an activist fighting wildlife crime and corruption. The interview focuses on the work carried out by the Network across the African countries where it operates and the dangers and effects of wildlife criminality.

Structure of the EAGLE Network

THE EAGLE Network

EAGLE: Eco Activists for Governance and Law Enforcement, is a network of members across Africa, who are replicating effectively a program and operational model to undertake wildlife law enforcement, which is based on the LAGA-Cameroon model, trailed, practiced and tested since 2003. The EAGLE Network currently operates in nine African countries and keeps expanding.

The over-arching objective of the EAGLE Network is: Developing civic activism and collaborating with governments and civil society to improve the application of national and international environmental legislation, through a program of activities: investigations, arrests, prosecutions and publicity. Through this, EAGLE aims to generate a strong deterrent against the illegal trade in wildlife, timber and related criminal activities, including corruption.
